Observing the operational model in China, it is evident that many products are produced based on the concept of home industries. Balancing work and education does not necessitate sacrificing one for the other; similarly, learning should not require abandoning work in favor of solely academic pursuits. If work is not feasible due to educational commitments, students should at least familiarize themselves with market trends and dynamics. Professors should facilitate webinars on a range of relevant topics. The organization consistently provides valuable support for these initiatives, and I can assure you that such assistance will continue in the future

➤ Total no. of participants were registered for the webinar were 235 and filled feedback form were 185

➤ And at the last Dr. Nitin Malegaonkar proposed the Vote of Thanks.
